

An American Express branded card issued by your bank.

A simple way to earn points faster

Hello, I'm Dave, here for a quick word about credit cards.

If you have a Qantas Frequent Flyer linked credit card from one of the major banks, you may have noticed there is also a bank issued American Express branded card available as part of your account.

You may think– “not interested! I’ve already got a card, why would I want another one?!”

Well, think again – there’s a very good reason why – POINTS.

This American Express branded card, issued by your bank, earns Qantas Frequent Flyer points at a great rate, so it can help you earn more points on your everyday purchases.

It comes as part of your existing credit card account – so you still have just one annual fee, one monthly statement and one credit limit. None of that changes.

But by pulling it out of your wallet first every time you pay for something, you can usually earn more points.

That simple. If you already pay with a credit card and earn points, why not pay with the card that could grow your points balance faster – and get the rewards you want sooner.

To find out how to add an American Express branded card to your account, give your bank a call. You’ll find their contact details here at qantas.com/cards

There are various terms and conditions, so please read the important information below to find out more.
